Micro-Gesture: Shake double shoulders

User

Please describe the image sequence, and describe the person's micro gesture. (Open-Ended Question)

The sequence of images you've uploaded appears to show a person seated at a table during what looks to be a press conference or interview, as indicated by the microphones and logos in the background. The person is wearing a black shirt with a white graphic design. In still images like these, any movement is implied and not confirmed without additional context or frames showing change in position.

User

Please describe the image sequence, and which better describes this micro gesture? Crossing fingers? Folding arms? Rubbing eyes? Shake double shoulders? Touching or scratching head? (Multiple-Choice Question)

Crossing your fingers, folding your arms, rubbing your eyes, shaking your shoulders, and touching or scratching your head are not featured in this video sequence. To accurately assess any movement, a video or a series of images showing progression of motion would be necessary.

User

Please describe the image sequence, and determine if the person is shake double shoulders? (Judgment Question)

From the still images alone, it's not possible to conclusively determine if the person is shaking their shoulders. To accurately assess any movement, a video or a series of images showing progression of motion would be necessary. In still images like these, any movement is implied and not confirmed without additional context or frames showing change in position.
